LVMH Moët Hennessy Louis Vuitton SE [1,2]

PARIS, ÎLE-DE-FRANCE, FRANCE · FOUNDED 1987 · 211,552 EMPLOYEES

LVMH is a diversified global luxury leader spanning fashion, jewelry, beauty, selective retailing and wines and spirits. Q3 2026 organic revenue grew 1%, with Selective Retailing up 8% and Watches & Jewelry up 6%, offsetting a 5% decline in Fashion & Leather Goods. The stock debate is whether growth outside fashion and creative renewal can restore earnings momentum despite weak Chinese demand and continued contraction in its core fashion business. [3,4]

> Through its Maisons, LVMH sells wines and spirits, fashion and leather goods, perfumes and cosmetics, watches and jewelry, and provides selective retailing, media, yacht, hotel, and hospitality services. It serves luxury consumers worldwide, including international travelers through DFS and guests of its hotel businesses. [1,5]

Bull case

Medium confidence · lvmh.com

01 Diversification is supporting growth: Q3 organic revenue increased 8% in Selective Retailing and 6% in both Watches & Jewelry and Wines & Spirits, while Sephora continued gaining market share. [4]

02 Cash generation remains resilient: H1 2026 operating free cash flow increased 2% to €4.1 billion, while the recurring operating margin remained 22.5%. [3]

03 Creative renewal offers a recovery lever: Q2 organic growth reached 3%, with management citing Dior's new designs, Louis Vuitton's new stores and Tiffany and Bvlgari product lines as drivers. [3]

Bear case

Medium confidence · lvmh.com

01 The core fashion business remains weak: Fashion & Leather Goods organic revenue fell 5% in Q3 2026, with the company citing slowing Chinese demand. [4]

02 The recovery lacks momentum: group organic growth slowed from 3% in Q2 to 1% in Q3, while nine-month reported revenue fell 2% to €57.1 billion. [3,4]

03 Profit recovery remains unproven: H1 2026 recurring operating profit fell 4% to €8.7 billion, including a 7% decline in Fashion & Leather Goods profit to €6.2 billion. [3,11]

Key risks

Medium confidence · lvmh.com, urd.lvmh.com

01 A prolonged Chinese luxury-demand slowdown could deepen the weakness already evident in Fashion & Leather Goods during Q3 2026. [4]

02 Trade tensions, higher tariffs and regional conflict could disrupt tourism, logistics and store operations or weaken LVMH's competitiveness, as flagged in its annual report. [9]

03 Adverse exchange rates could continue depressing reported revenue and earnings, after reducing nine-month 2026 revenue growth by 3 percentage points and weighing on H1 fashion profitability. [4,11]

04 Any erosion of product quality, exclusivity or distribution discipline could damage the brand reputation on which LVMH's luxury positioning depends. [9]
